when in the state of weakness and degradation which their want of civilization necessarily implies, they have to cope with some of the most cruel and atrocity of our species, who carry on this system of profission with almost perfect impunity as long as the existence of native interests is excluded from our bounds.

The attention of the Committee of the Aboriginal Protection Society has been again called to this subject by a letter from Robert Hakes, by one of their corresponding Members at Adelaide, a settlement which stands foremost amongst our Colonies for the better feeling which it had festered towards the native population. That letter contains the particulars of a case in which the practical difficulty has been exhibited, accompanied with the expression of urgent desire that the remedy might be applied by the admission of native evidence.

For the purpose of obtaining the removal of this very serious inability from the native populations of our Australian Colonies and of thereby securing at least one step towards their elevation, the Aboriginal Protection Society have had a Bill prepared which they hoped would be passed with the concurrence and support of Her Majesty's Government.
Government.

Intimation however having reached the Committee of Supply that the course which it was prepared to take did not meet the approbation of the Colonial office, it has determined to suspend the further prosecution of the Bill and again address the Colonial office in the hope that the effect which they now offer limited as it is to the subject of evidence and confined to the Aborigines of Australia or to the Australasian and the islands of the Pacific will not be made in vain. The Committee cannot but anticipate that the effectual carrying out of measures calculated to secure the...
The object which the Bill in question was destined to obtain will prove so real a boon to the native population and so important to the class of British Emigrants, so decided a check to w[il]d [d]eeds, and so satisfactory to the friends of humanity in this country, that it may be briefly followed up by similar measures applicable to all the colonies in our Colonies and Dependent territories.
